SPANISH PATRIOTS.

Amongst the stratagems practised by Sieyes and Talleyrand, the apostates and managers of the grand drama, called the French revolution, to prolong the delusion of mankind, and hold over the world the despotism lately substituted for democracy in France, not one has been attended with more complete success: than the insidious declaration of war upon neutrals, made at Berlin in November, 1806.

Money being the consideration, for which it is agreed estates and chattles shall pass, there is no other thing about the value of which there is so much unanimity as money; and as the grand machinists had cleared the vaults of their northern neighbors, their longing eyes were turned on the pitance remaining in the south.

At the instigation of a treacherous prince of peace, the king of Spain, who, like many other princes and people, enchanted by the revolutionary spell, and as incapable of flying or fighting as the unflinched brood in the eagle's eye, had surrendered his fortified towns and sent away his disciplined troops: but how to subdue a loyal people, countenanced by independent neutrals, and supported by a rival nation and powerful enemy, fed and enriched by those neutrals, was the only difficulty which the object presented.

Knowing that the United States had given asylum to multitudes of emigrants from the British dominions, who only panted to revenge real or imaginary grievances, and that those emigrants possessed a considerable influence in the measures of a popular government; and knowing that the ruling party, to perpetuate its power, had relinquished the public dues on persons and property, and deprived itself of all pecuniary resource save those imposed on a commerce which still, from the circumstances of the times, enriched and endeared all who pursued it: knowing all this, it would be easy, for peace, by talking about the liberty of the seas; and at least for a time measured in proportion to this particular state of things, prevent the boldest and plainest declarations from producing an open rupture. The success of the imposition was the less doubtful as that ruling party had repeatedly committed themselves, by apologies for revolutionary aggressions previously made, and by asseverations of certain future friendship on the part of France; and above all, from the known timidity and retiring policy of rulers, affecting to be the only advocates of peace.

Although, said the managers, the revolutionary cruizers will perfectly understand the decrees, and, as far as in their power, put them in strict execution, (1) the decision of the prize courts will not take place for a length of time (2); the ministers of officious enquiries can be avoided by the absence of the court and cabinet; and if it should be necessary, when instructions shall arrive from America, which can scarcely happen before the opening of the intended interlude, prevarication here will bear out the temporising disposition of that government, until all is in complete operation.

But even George the third will not be amused by promises or pretensions, (3) England will issue forth the retaliating orders, which will fall, continued the managers, with infinitely more severity on the neutral, and leave him but one of two alternatives, either to renounce the most lucrative trade he possesses, the carrying for the continent, or openly attack the nation which stands in the way of it. Should he prefer self-annihilation, and withdraw from the sea altogether, which is scarcely possible, the effect will be the same, and he will be equally entitled to the gratitude of the grand managers.

In case Spain and Portugal should decline the generous proposal of their benefactors, and refuse to give up their crowns and treasures to the puppets until compelled, England becomes their ally of course, and the neutral who will not have given up the carrying trade, either stops his intercourse with the refractory patriot "rebels," or enters into open warfare with them; and, whichever it may be, becomes tributary to the cause of the dramatists, and the contemptible instrument through which a power directly invulnerable, is impoverished; and nations to which he was bound by solemn treaties, and more sacred acts of friendship, are overthrown.

Such, in fact, is the history of the part which has been played on the United States, and we have been forced to take in the horrible interlude now performing. How unlike this part, my countrymen, is that performed by a few Swedes, who, by setting at defiance the menaces of every usurper, extorts the respect of the worst. Not one circumstance here related, can be referred to fortune or accident, those great first causes in the creed of prodigates, mountebanks and idolaters.

Who then can be surprised, that the movers of the machinery at Paris, bursting with self-approbation, should have dared to unfurl, in the face of the world, the scroll on which was legible—"We accept the sacrifice of the trading class, as a pledge of the important interest they take in our aggrandizement."!!

Thus assured, if not of active participation, at least of passive acquiescence, by a power which habitually furnished most essential supplies to the devoted states, the want of which supplies completed the impoverishment begun by the infamous prince of peace; and rendering the duration of this system, according to the intrenchments formed, for the best purposes by a generous people, round their own forbearance, and the constitutional difficulties of a change here, the authors of the dramatic interlude did not neglect to engrave their mirrors of chance and fortune, who are also the worshippers of the wonderful, by a pompous declaration, that the imperial puppet should crown his brother at Madrid, and plant his standards on the mountains of Portugal, between which places and his forces there was not, at that time, nor could be for a long time afterwards, a single battery, or body of men equal in number to his own life guards.

Notwithstanding the fulfilment of the prophecy made by the managers themselves, and which they themselves had secured the means of performing, should have opened the eyes of the people at once, the influence of the democrats was such, that little, or nothing effectual, was accomplished until the interlude was nearly performed.

Happily the United States possessed citizens capable of turning the retiring principles of the administration to good account at last, and by a sudden display of real republican energy, operating on a little democratic resignation, it was forced to relinquish the self-destroying and disgraceful system, first, by opening the intercourse with Spain and Portugal, those very countries which had most suffered by the interregnum, and afterwards, by a friendly correspondence with their allies the English. Yet it is vainly hoped to keep on terms with the Grand Dramatists, and that they will voluntarily repay by an act of compliance on their part, an act of compliance to Great Britain on ours, as if the interlude began by the embargo, or orders of council, and not by the Berlin decree, and as if they were not as much exposed now to the blockades on which that declaration of war was ostensibly founded, as in the fall of 1806.

Although as it respects the government of the United States, it may be said of the late propositions of the British, "it was asking a man almost worn out by disease, if he would accept of a cure," in the language of the French minister, when the victorious queen Anne made proposals of peace to his master, the acceptance of those propositions cannot but be considered voluntary, as it respects the nation; for they have long since been anxiously looked for, and heartily applauded by the people.

But, that the idolaters may not go distracted from the loss of confidence in the idol, who, even in his apprenticeship in Egypt, cost France an army and a navy, it is no more than charity to inform them, if I may be allowed a little gaiety at their expence, that the managers never prophesied or promised, that the embargo should last forever, any more than that the rebel insurgents should be converted into loyal subjects. So that, if the non-intercourse with England be converted into war with France or the patriots of Spain and Portugal send the invader and his Vandal mercenaries whence they came, no charge will lay against the foresight of the imposters.

It is even probable that anxious to maintain the subjection of those rich colonies, which mainly render Spain and Portugal desirable conquests, and dreading, least by precipitation they may contribute to erect an everlasting barrier between them;—for these reasons, I say, it is even probable that if practicable or convenient, the grand managers or machinists would not push the war to extremities; but, trusting to time and negotiation, or rather to the well tried arm of subornation and enchantment, they suffer hostilities to languish in the south and west, returning to the north and east, to levy what little the industry of the Germans may have accumulated during their short absence.

Already the hawks have fixed their prey, and spread their talons; but as no people have ever yet been kind enough first to make war on them, they are again themselves under the necessity of opening the scene of another performance before the curtain drops on the last, and for a prologue Paris papers have, as usual on such occasions, teemed with translations of intercepted Dutch letters of a hostile complexion, which were originally fabricated in France, and never crossed the frontier, but proving to the entire satisfaction of the d p s and I, that Austria, blindly seeking its fated overthrow, will not let the managing alone, and wait in peace the termination of the Spanish interlude.

From the Newbern Federal Republican,
MAY 6.

"All speak of change—the renovated form,
Of long forgotten things arise again."

ONCE more shall the ocean be whitened by the canvass of America, while our "dignified retirement" will only be remembered, to admonish us of the folly of attempting to starve the world to terms.

interests demand it.

Attonement for the outrage on the Chesapeake—

The rescinding of the British orders—
The renewal of friendly and commercial intercourse between the two countries—

And the fair prospect of a satisfactory adjustment of all existing differences between the U. States and G. Britain.

These happy events and cheering prospects, were celebrated with great joy and festivity on Wednesday last, by the Federal republicans of the town of Newbern.—At 12 o'clock, a federal salute was fired in honor of the occasion. A more numerous, respectable and happy meeting, has rarely been witnessed on any former public occasion, in this town. The company was alike respectable, whether professional men, mercantile men, men engaged in agricultural or mechanical pursuits, or those hardy sons of Neptune, whose business it is to plough the ocean, of the first character in their respective vocations, be required to constitute an assemblage of American citizens respectable. The pleasure of the company was heightened by the presence of several of their country friends.

About two o'clock, the company began to assemble at Mr. Weeks' hotel; and shortly after sat down to an excellent dinner, prepared by Mr. Weeks, in his spacious and very pleasant room, in a style which did not fail to attract the attention, and entitled him to the compliments of his guests.

The presiding officers were Mr. John Green, president, and Daniel Curthy, esq. vice-president.

The following are the toasts of the day, which, with the discharges of cannon, appropriate songs, and the high spirits which seemed to animate every heart, gave a lively zest to the feast.

TOASTS.

1. The 10th day of June, 1809—the day after which the trade of the United States with Great Britain may be renewed—3 cheers.

2. Non-importation, non-intercourse and embargo laws, with their train of additions, supplements and enforcements, farewell—a long farewell to all their mischiefs!—6 cheers.

3. The re-establishment of a cordial understanding between the United States and Great Britain. The advances already made towards an adjustment of differences, promise the attainment of this great object—3 cheers.

4. The new alternative. Neither war, submission, nor embargo; but frank and honorable negotiation—3 cheers.

5. The American people—too proud to surrender their own rights—too just to invade the rights of others—3 cheers.

6. The memory of the illustrious George Washington. Veneration for his virtuous gratitude for his services, are best exhibited in a faithful adherence to his principles—(Standing.)

7. The President of the U. States—while he pursues the straight course of honesty and wisdom, may he encounter no faction opposition—should he deviate into the bye paths of folly and intrigue, may he find no servile followers.

8. Congress of the U. States—wisely using the experience of their predecessors, may they more respect the interests of their country, than the visionary theories of a political favorite.

9. The judiciaries of the union, and of the individual states—while they possess a Marshall—a Johnston, and a Tilghman, they will command the reverence and affection of the American people—3 cheers.

10. The army and navy of the U. S.—intended as the means of defence—may they never be converted into instruments of oppression.

11. The state of North Carolina—firmly attached to the federal compact, she has steadily rejected the innovations which would destroy it.

12. Timothy Pickering, the American Aristides. "He is not the advocate of wrong doers to whatever country they belong—whether emperors or kings, or the administrators of a republic—justice is his aim—truth his guide—wherever she points the way, he will not fear to go."—9 cheers.

13. The minority of the last congress—It is not their fault that we have not yet gained the summit of prosperity, but it is their glory that we have been rescued from an abyss of ruin—9 cheers.

14. Our brethren of the East—their intelligence and firmness have not been exerted in vain: again will they cultivate their farms on the ocean: again gather harvests in every sea—9 cheers.

15. Agriculture, commerce and the mechanic arts—Connected by interest, may they be divided by artifice.

16. The Spanish patriots—whatever their fate, our hearts and souls are with them—3 cheers.

17. The American Fair—Their domestic virtues soothe our cares, animate our courage, and endear to us our country.

VOLUNTEERS.

By Mr. Carthy—The memory of sir John Moore, and the glorious retreat of the twenty-five thousand British from Sahagun to Corunna.

By Mr. Graham—Distressed American Seamen, throughout the globe—Whether pining in the gloom of French dungeons, or groaning (the credulous victims of the Miranda expedition) in Spanish chains, whether they heave their sighs under the rigors of British impressment, or suffer the evils of penury and want, the cruel effects of baneful embargo laws; may they soon engage a sympathy in their government, more effectual towards their relief, than they have found in the cold neglect, and delusive professions of the Philosopher of Monticello.

By Mr. Stanly—Mr. Josiah Quincy—The sagacious statesman—the able and undaunted defender of his country's rights.

By Mr. Gaston—The America Tar—high wages—steady employment and effectual protection.

IN COMMON COUNCIL,

Making a federal majority of 14 in the house.

The senate consists of 32 members who hold their seat for four years. They are elected in classes, eight being chosen every year. Last year there was but one federalist in the senate. Of the eight chosen this spring, five (from the eastern and western districts) are federal—and three (from the middle and southern) are democratic. Majorities not yet ascertained, but there is a clear majority of federal senatorial votes in the senate.

The council, by which all the appointments excepting those of treasurer and printer, are made, consists of the governor and one senator from each of the four great districts, chosen by the house.

The democrats it is said, amidst all their ill fortune, console themselves with the idea that a federal council cannot be chosen, there being only two districts represented by federalists. Although the true patriots of the state, who have completely triumphed at this election, have a dearer object in view than the mere attainment of offices—yet let not the faction flatter themselves. There are independent senators in every district, who will readily join in the enquiry when a candidate is proposed for an office—"Is he honest? Is he capable? Is he faithful to the constitution?" and few of the present office-holding gentry, can expect the approbation of such a council.

Some of the democrats now begin to cast the blame of the recent settlement with G. Britain upon the president's wife. They say she is a federalist, and has too much influence over her spouse. What a happy circumstance would it have been for this country had Thomas Jefferson been governed by such a woman.

[Trenton Fed.]

SEAMEN.

The disposal of the affair of impressment will doubtless form the most prominent and difficult subject of discussion on the arrival of the expected British envoy.

The injury to the citizens of the U. States from this source has been great, particularly at some seasons; but nothing to be compared with the estimates which are given to the public. When the basis upon which they are framed, is least unexceptionable, they are taken from the number of applications made to the consuls and agents, without distinguishing the repetitions of the same individual and without the possibility of deducting those who ought to be excluded from the number, on account of their false assumption of the American character.— Instead of aggravating the picture, it is our interest to reduce it to a close resemblance of truth; because if the government of G. Britain were sensible how little strength her navy gain by outrages on our merchant service, we might presume that she would be less tenacious of the right to which she lays claim. She ought, and we hope she will, consider that claim no otherwise important than as a barrier against desertions from her navy. To regain the British seamen already in our service is not of so much moment, considering her vast resources for manning her navy. If therefore any expedient can be devised to secure her against losing others in future, we take for granted that she will be satisfied. Such expedients are not impracticable to a great degree, and they may be made promotive of our own resources for supplying our vessels, and insure us at the same time a sufficient number of faithful, expert and valuable seamen for both commercial and defensive purposes.— Happy the day when they shall be cordially offered on one side, and wisely accepted on the other!

[North American.]

A duel took place yesterday morning between sir George Macklin and captain —, lately of the French army, near the Black Horse tavern within a few miles of this city. Sir George Macklin was on the ground about half past three, attended by his second, Mr. O—y, and Dr. B—k; a short time after which, capt. F. accompanied by his second made his appearance.

The ground had been previously measured, twelve paces, but at the instance of sir George, the distance was reduced to ten. They both fired at the same moment, by signal. Sir George received a ball near the groin, and capt. F. was wounded in the left arm. When sir George received the wound he beckoned to his opponent to make his escape, as he was convinced his wound was mortal. Mr. O. and sir George's servant, supported him to his carriage and he returned to town.

The circumstances that produced this unfortunate affair, will not be uninteresting. Sir George Macklin is enthusiastically attached to the prince of Wales, and has, whenever it has been necessary, without even consulting his personal safety, been a zealous defender of his character, capt. F. is only a few days from France, and in company with sir George and some others, the conversation unfortunately turned on the present royal family of G. Britain, when capt. F. uttered the most illiberal abuse against every branch of it—but particularly against the prince of Wales. At which sir George demanded if he knew that he was a subject of G. Britain. Capt. F. replied in the affirmative. When sir George informed him that his assertions with respect to the prince of Wales were base and unmanly, equally destitute of probability and truth, nor would he ever suffer him or any of his nation to traduce with impunity the character of that prince. Words of such import followed that the parties exchanged cards.— In a few hours sir G. received a challenge from capt. F.

Sir George Macklin had been absent from his native country (Ireland) about two years, and during that period had visited Germany, Sweden and these states. He was returning from a visit to the British ambassador, previous to his setting out for Ireland, when this unfortunate circumstance occurred.

[U. S. Gazette of the 18th inst.]

From an ancient English publication. The reader will perceive that the following Poem is built on the text prefixed, and that the first line of each stanza is borrowed from it.

Behold, alas! our days we spend
How vain they be, how soon they end!

BEHOLD

How short a span
Was long enough of old
To measure out the life of man;
In those well temper'd days, his time was then Survey'd, cast up, and found but three score years and ten.

ALAS!

And what is that?
They come, and slide and pass,
Before my pen can tell thee what.

The posts of time are swift, which having run
Their seven short stages o'er, their short liv'd task is done.

OUR DAYS

Begin, we lend
To sleep to antic plays
And toys until the first stage end;
Twelve waning moons twice five times told,
we give
To unrecover'd loss; we rather breathe than live.

WE SPEND

A ten year's breath,
Before we apprehend
What 'tis to live, or fear a death;
Our childish dreams are fill'd with painted joys,
Which please our sense a while, and waking,
prove but toys!

HOW VAIN

How wretched is Poor man that doth remain
A slave to such a state as this!
His days are short at longest; few at most;
They are but hard at best; yet lavish'd out or lost.

THEY BE

The secret springs,
That make our minutes flee
On wheels more swift than eagle's wings!
Our life's a clock, and every gasp of breath Breathes forth a warning grief, till time shall strike a death!

HOW SOON

Our new-born light
Attains to full-aged noon!
And this, how soon to grey hair'd night!
We spring, we bud, we blossom and we blast,
E'er we can count our days, our days they flee so fast.

THEY END,

When scarce begun;
And ere we apprehend
That we begin to live, our life is done:
Man count thy days; and if they fly too fast
For thy dull thoughts to count, count every day the last.

USEFUL PROPERTIES

YARWOOD'S Patent Washing Machine.

THIS highly useful Machine is found by experience to excel any hitherto in use. It will wash as many cloaths (by the assistance of one person) in an hour as can be washed in a whole day, without the possibility of injuring, fretting or tearing the most delicate article, and with less than half the quantity of soap. It occupies very little more space than the common wash-tub, and with the least care will not create any slop or wet—the construction is very simple and attended with little expence. A further description of its qualities is now deemed unnecessary, as it is presumed none will purchase without examining it.

We the subscribers do hereby certify that we have found, on trial, the above named Machine to answer fully the above description. Given under our hands this 5th day of May, A. D. 1809.

Doctor I. J. Comyn,

A professional DENTIST—of Baltimore,

RESPECTFULLY acquaints the LADIES and GENTLEMEN of Alexandria, that he intends to practice in this place for a few days, in all the various branches of his profession. No genteel person of either sex, can give or receive pleasure or comfort, by teeth coated with tart or decayed gums, or stained breath. His method of cleaning the teeth will be found both easy and efficacious, as hundreds can attest in Baltimore and elsewhere. Without giving pain, or hurting the enamel, he removes the tartar, &c. when the teeth will assume a beautiful appearance the gums adhering to the teeth; but if the state of the gums require it, doctor C. will give to the person an antiscorbutic lotion of chemical preparation, which gained the applause of hundreds both in Europe and America.—

It is pleasant, innocent, and effectual, in smoothing and whitening the teeth and curing the gums, rendering them red and firm, preventing the decay of the teeth and sweet-ening the breath. Doct. C. fits artificial teeth from one to an entire set, with such nicety, as to answer the useful purposes of nature, and of so natural an appearance that it is impossible to distinguish them from real ones. Dr.

C. flatters himself from his being regularly bred to the practice of physick, as well as to the Dentist Business, and his long experience on the continent of Europe (France and Spain) to give to all those who favour him with their commands, every possible satisfaction.
